BULBS AND BULBOUS PLANTS FOR 1926

It will always be our endeavour to supply the very best Bulbs, true to the description given in this catalogue, but it is a condition of sale of all Bulbs sent out by us, that, though we give you our assurance that we are using all reasonable care in the selection, we accept no responsibility in regard to the crop or failure of crop. All orders are booked on the understanding that these conditions are agreed to and we also notify to the same effect on the invoice. If the conditions are not acceptable to you the goods should be returned at once.

Quotations are without engagement, but where the price is mentioned on the order we will refer back for confirmation if an increased rate has to be charged. If we fail to do this, the goods can be returned if the price is not approved.

When we are unable to supply the exact variety ordered, we use our best judgment as to substituting other varieties. Any such substitutions are always made with a due regard to season, locality and other conditions so far as known to us.

The substituted varieties are sent for your approval, and while we hope and feel sure you will agree to what we have done with a desire to serve your best interests, you are at liberty to send back any such goods and we will promptly credit you with their value.

GLADIOLI.

In this section we are listing a very fine range of all the most popular hybrid types as well as a choice range of individually named varieties of fine exhibition type. There is no more satisfying hobby than the cultivation of these intensely beautiful flowers and in South Africa they thrive as they do nowhere else for it is the home of numerous native species and the climate is quite suitable.

In over-seas catalogues most of the dwarf types are described as "early-flowering," but we think the term misleading for South Africa and from our experience we would suggest that most of the dwarf varieties will be found useful for spring planting to flower in summer after the larger types have finished blooming, thus providing a longer flowering period for these popular plants.

GLADIOLUS "PAINTED LADY"
(Dwarf Type)

NOTES ON THE CHARACTERISTICS AND CULTIVATION OF SOUTH AFRICAN BULBOUS PLANTS.

Although South African plants have long been cultivated in Europe, and especially during the latter half of the eighteenth century, we are only just beginning to realise the horticultural possibilities of our native flora. And none too soon—for several of our rarest and most beautiful species are in danger of becoming extinct on account of our apathetic attitude towards the wholesale destruction of our wild flowers through indiscriminate and unorganised plucking and selling.

At present there are unmistakeable signs of a re-awakening of interest in South African plants. American horticultural magazines publish "special" articles, profusely illustrated, on the cultivation of various South African Irises of which many of our gardeners have never heard! In this movement we should take a proud and active part. The splendid work being done by the National Botanic Gardens at Kirstenbosch in the preservation of our flora and in experimental work on their cultivation deserves the recognition and encouragement of the ever-increasing body of enthusiastic growers of South African plants. In this connection the annual Journals of the Botanical Society, which exists to help Kirstenbosch, are full of valuable information, while, also under the auspices of the Society, demonstrations in gardening are held on the third Saturday afternoon in each month.

The following notes are limited to such of our native plants as appear in this catalogue.

South African Bulbous Plants.

The term "bulbous," although more restricted in its botanical use, is applied generally speaking to all plants which have an underground root-stock for the purpose of storing food, commonly for use during the resting period when the plant dies down above ground. This underground rootstock is known as a "corm" when the stem has become modified as the storage organ. Plants possessing corms which appear in this Catalogue are Gladioli, including Africanders and Painted Ladies, Ixias, Watsonias, Antholyzas, Babianas, Dierama, Freesia, Sparaxis and Tritonias.

These all belong to the Iridaceae or Iris family, as can be seen by their possession of the following floral characters:—

- (a) parts arranged in threes.
- (b) inferior ovary.
- (c) a single row of three stamens.

Gladioli may be distinguished from other Irises by several characteristics e.g.,

- (a) The flowers are arranged in spikes.
- (b) The stigmas are unbranched.
- (c) The bracts (protecting the flower) are herbaceous.
- (d) The flower-segments are not all alike.
- (e) The tube of the flower is funnel-shaped.

Ixias again have membranous bracts, the flower segments alike and a narrow tube suddenly widening into a bowl.

The more familiar Watsonias are easily recognisable and have their stigmas two-branched.

Antholyzas are easily confused with Gladiolus and Watsonias, except that these not only have unbranched stigmas but a narrow tube, suddenly becoming cylindrical, and irregular flower-segments.

Babianas can always be recognised by their fan-folded leaves.

South African Bulbous Plants.

In Dierama the flower is bell-shaped and the bracts membranous.

Freesia, like Watsonia, has the stigma branched, but instead of the spike being vertical it is here horizontal.

Sparaxis has membranous bracts very much lacerated, while in Tritonia the bracts are not lacerated.

When leaves or the bases of leaves are modified to form a storage organ the rootstock is known as a bulb, e.g. Amaryllis Belladonna or March Lily, Crinum, Cyrtanthus, Haemanthus, Nerine and Vallota or Knysna Lily, belonging to the Amaryllis family or Amaryllidaceae, and Galtonia, Lachenalia and Ornithogalum or Chinkerichee which belong to Liliaceae.

Amaryllids may be distinguished from Irids by the possession of two rows of three stamens, while in the Liliaceae not only are both rows of stamens present but the ovary is superior.

The flowers and leaves of Crinum appear at the same time, while those of the Belladonna come at different seasons. In both these Amaryllids the fruit contains one or a few seeds only, while in Nerine, Vallota and Cyrtanthus the seeds are numerous. The petals of Nerine are free while those of Vallota and Cyrtanthus are partly joined to one another. In Vallota the tube is comparatively wider and longer than in Cyrtanthus. The fruit of Haemanthus is a berry.

Galtonia has angular seeds while those of Lachenalia and Ornithogalum are rounded. The Chinkerichee is found in vlei ground while Lachenalias prefer sandy or rocky situations.

When the root is swollen with reserves of food the rootstock is called a tuber. Such are Aponogeton, a water-plant, the magnificent Gloriosa Lily and Satyrium, an orchid.

When the storage organ is a creeping underground stem it is known as a rhizome, e.g. the Arum and Moraea iridioides, one of the few Irids without a corm.

Clivia, Agapanthus, the Red Hot Poker and Strelitzia have imperfect bulbs with thickened roots. They are perennial herbs and do not die down above ground during drought.

The bulbous plants here quoted may be roughly divided into

- (a) those which can be taken up and stored and
- (b) those best left in the ground.

As a general rule it is more advantageous to store such bulbous plants as have a definite resting-period; for this not only lessens the risk of damage from the rodent mole or Blesmol, but also gives the gardener an opportunity to cultivate and improve his soil.

Arums are readily adaptable and in favourable situations do not die down above ground. It would also be hardly practicable to dig up their creeping rhizomes. Agapanthus and others of the perennial type are best left in the ground and only lifted for division when new shoots have been formed. The late-flowering Watsonias are also best treated in this way, and such bulbous plants as are moisture-loving, e.g. Gladiolus tristis, or flower in the dry months, e.g. a few species of Antholyza and Gladiolus need similar treatment.

Those plants with underground rootstocks which enable them to have a dormant period during the dry months are of two kinds, according as they originate from the winter or summer rainfall areas. When such plants are transposed to the reverse conditions it becomes, as a rule, more necessary to take up the rootstocks in order to get the best results. It will be readily seen that a plant from the Eastern Province, accustomed to remain dormant during a cold dry winter, would not thrive if left underground in the Western Province where we have heavy rain at that season.

Summer-flowering are several species of Gladiolus, Watsonias and Tritonia, Gloriosa, Crinum, Vallota and Freesia.

Winter-flowering are Moraea, Ixia, species of Watsonia, Gladiolus and Antholyza, Babiana, Dierama, Freesia (when transferred to the Western Province and planted in April), Lachenalia, Satyrium and Sparaxis. Many of these are more truly early Spring-flowering but may be classed with the Winter-flowering for horticultural purposes.

The majority of our larger ornamental Amaryllids are characteristically Autumn-flowering, e.g. Amaryllis, Haemanthus and Nerine. As they rest during Summer drought, they may be treated on the same lines as the Winter-flowering.

The fact that so many of our South African plants are extremely local in their distribution prepares us for their need of individual conditions. But once established in well-drained and suitable surroundings the majority amply repay any thoughtful attention.

Arums do well in marshy ground near streams or in fairly shady woods.

The brown Africander is partial to flats or hillsides and can stand a considerable period of drought.

Painted Ladies need a slightly more secluded spot, but as a rule are also found on hillsides or the more gravelly portions of the flats.

Watsonias as a rule are hardy, doing well on gravelly soil or brown sandy loam. The Summer-flowering species seem to favour less arid conditions.

Agapanthus are suitable for almost any garden soils, some of the large varieties being successful even in very sandy soil.

Belladonnas prefer shady spots and appear to great advantage planted beneath oaks.

Antholyzas need varying treatment according to their species.

Babianas are partial to very sandy soils.

Cyrtanthus according to the species, may need a fairly moist situation, e.g. Cyrtanthus obliquus where the leaves remain green all the year round. A fairly rich loam is favourable for these Amaryllids.

Crinum, which also does not die down, requires similar conditions.

Dierama can be grown on a sandy loam with a fair amount of humus. It is an exceedingly graceful plant and eminently repays a little cultivation.

Gloriosa should be planted in situations where it can twine over trellises or trees, etc. Its striking and handsome flowers will then be seen to best advantage. It needs a certain degree of moisture, being a forest plant.

Haemanthus is found near the coast on sandy mountain slopes. The species quoted has a pair of large flat green leaves which appear in Winter.

Ixias are partial to dry sandy soil, and in such situations are fairly easily grown.

Lachenalias are found either near sandy flats or among rocks whence they derive their name of "Klip Kalossies." They make very fine pot plants.

Ornithogalums are partial to vlei ground, but do well even in fairly sandy spots.

The Satyrium quoted can be grown in extremely sandy soil.

Sparaxis like Ixias are hardy and can be given similar treatment.

The Red Hot Poker prefers slightly shaded positions as the leaves are evergreen.

Tritonias for the most part can be planted in fairly dry situations, though they do well in more rich sandy soil, especially Tritonia hyalina.

Vallota needs shade and careful handling. It makes an ornamental pot-plant.

The larger Gladioli are already famous, but the slender, more graceful species are set off in all their daintiness by green lawns and a grassy back ground.

The majority seed freely, and once in cultivation can soon with proper care be produced in sufficient quantity for mass effects. After the first rains the seeds are sown, and as transplanting should not take place before a fair-sized root-stock has been formed, it is advisable to have them a fair distance apart from the outset. The Summer-flowering species are sown in Spring.

These are only a few of the treasures to be found among the almost inexhaustible store of our native plants. Many of the smaller flowers such as the Golden Stars, the Romuleas and Galaxias though not yet generally known would be most effective when massed or in cobbled paths as may be witnessed in the Spring or Autumn at Kirstenbosch.

The Babianas make vivid borders, while the taller and harder Antholyzas and Agapanthus, etc., would grace the stateliest of terraces and avenues.
